Good Clinical Practice (GCP)

Good Clinical Practice (GCP) is an internationally recognized set of guidelines and standards for conducting clinical trials involving human subjects. GCP guidelines are established by the International Council for Harmonisation (ICH) of Technical Requirements for Pharmaceuticals for Human Use, specifically under the ICH E6 (R2) guideline. Adherence to GCP ensures that clinical trials are conducted ethically, safely, and scientifically, facilitating the development of new medical treatments and ensuring public trust in the research process.
