Dear Participants

Warm greetings from the Department of E.N.T and HEAD and NECK, Sri Devaraj Urs Medical College, Tamaka, Kolar We are delighted to share that the Department of E.N.T and HEAD and NECK at SDUMC is committed to promoting innovative teaching.

Dr. Sampath Chandra Prasad Rao will deliver a series of engaging and insightful sessions that offer a comprehensive exploration of skull base anatomy and pathology, tailored for ENT students and surgeons. Beginning with a dynamic 360-degree perspective of the skull base, he will illuminate the complex spatial relationships and critical neurovascular structures that form the foundation of safe and effective surgical practice. The discussion will then progress to state-of-the-art management of skull base paragangliomas, showcasing the latest innovations in imaging, molecular diagnostics, and surgical strategy. In addressing the challenges of internal carotid artery involvement, he will present practical, evidence-based approaches to its preservation and reconstruction during high-stakes procedures. Finally, he will examine the shifting paradigms in skull base osteomyelitis, highlighting new clinical presentations and evolving treatment protocols.

These sessions promise to be both academically enriching and clinically relevant, offering participants an opportunity to deepen their understanding and sharpen their surgical decision-making in this highly specialized field.
